Miami, FL – November 2025. Pan American Art Projects is pleased to present No More Heroes, a group exhibition that brings together sixteen artists whose works reflect on the disappearance of collective ideals and the fragile beauty that emerges in their wake. Borrowing its title from the 1977 song by The Stranglers, the exhibition becomes a meditation on a world without myths, where the notion of the “hero” dissolves into silence, memory, and power. The show will bring together works by represented artists and pieces from the gallery’s collection.

Through painting, sculpture, installation, and photography, No More Heroes explores the tension between presence and absence, faith and disillusion, light and void. The participating artists navigate the intersections between history and imagination, confronting the debris of grand narratives and reconstructing meaning through subtle transformations.

Rather than lamenting the loss of heroes, the exhibition embraces it as an opening, a space where vulnerability becomes strength and inspiration becomes an act of quiet resistance. In this landscape without dogma, beauty arises from collapse, and art assumes the role once reserved for legends: to question, to rebuild, and to illuminate what remains.

Hosted in the gallery’s Little River space, this exhibition marks a closing chapter for Pan American Art Projects in Little River. The specifics of the new chapter in Allapattah and possibly in a second location outside of Miami will be announced soon.

Participating artists: Pavel Acosta, Serlian Barreto, Ariamna Contino, Edouard Duval-Carrié, Carlos Estévez, Diana Fonseca, Jose Manuel Fors, Luis González Palma, Lorena Gutierrez Camejo, Jorge Lopez Pardo, Carlos Nicanor, Ivan Perera, Leticia Sánchez Toledo, Rusty Scruby, Rachel Valdes, and Chantae Elaine Wright.

Pan American Art Projects invites collectors, curators, and friends of the gallery to join in this special presentation.
